PREFACE.

THE coins in this collection are the gathering of many years' assiduous labor on the part of the late owner, Dr. Henry D. Fowle, and present to numismatists an opportunity to enrich their cabinets seldom offered.

While living, Dr. Fowle had the reputation of being an ardent student of the antique in numismatics; but a cursory examination of the catalogue will prove that while he paid especial attention to this particular branch, he also gathered to his cabinet fine and rare specimens in other departments of numismatology. His collection of modern medals has rarely, if ever, been excelled, and the student and historian can here find valuable aids to their favorite pursuits; in the Papal medals, Roman Catholics, likewise, can obtain many valuable mementos of their faith for centuries past.

For the minor and common pieces Dr. Fowle cared but little, yet a few will be found in the collection—as they are in every cabinet.

In making a collection of Greek and Roman antiques, the original and genuine pieces cannot always be obtained, either from their being unique or commanding such exorbitant prices as to put them beyond the reach of ordinary collectors—and Dr. Fowle's cabinet is not an exception to the general rule; consequently electrotype copies are here to be found, but they are copies of fine and rare pieces that can very rarely be obtained in the original. The British Museum, and some of the most valuable collections in the country, contain similar copies, but their owners do not pretend that they are genuine pieces. In this department all the coins have been submitted to an expert, a practical electrotyper, and whenever a piece is known or suspected to be a copy, it is so stated.

As this is an administrator's sale, it is peremptory; and as a fair and faithful description of the coins and medals has been attempted, no allowance can be made for what some might perhaps consider an overdrawn description, for the purchaser and compiler of the catalogue may have an honest difference of opinion in that respect.

As many of our numismatists have more or less of the Gallerie Metallique and Series Numismatica Medals, the following series is offered in small lots, that everyone may have an opportunity to complete or extend his collection in this particular line. As the medals may not be familiar to all collectors, it is here stated that the obverse bears a fine and well executed bust of each person named, and the reverse the time of birth and death, forming a valuable historical help to the student. They are all in fine condition and of size 26. No duplicates in a lot, and no lot a duplicate of another.
